aware of the presence of the throng. He was dressed in a heavy overcoat and black felt hat, and was hurried up to the cars to protect his throat from possible cold.

Those on board the special with Mr. Taft were former Secretary Leslie M. Shaw, Colonel Dan S. Handell, sergeant-at-arms of the United States Senate, who has charge of the party; Senator William Alden Smith, of Michigan; Dr. J. J. Richardson, of Washington, who is looking after Mr. Taft's throat; two stenographers, and the following named newspaper men: Robert C. Bailey, of the Associated Press; Robert H. Hazard, of the United Press; Elling A. Fowler, of the New York Sun; Harry T. Dunlap, of the World; George G. Hill, of the Tribune; T. W. Brannan, of the New York Evening Post; J. T. Hay, Jr., of the Boston Herald; J. W. Faulkner, of the Cincinnati Enquirer; and H. E. C. Bryant, of the Charlotte Observer.

James T. Williams represents the national committee, and Augustus J. Karger is at the head of the publicity bureau.

Those on the reception committee and at the train to meet Judge Taft were as follows: Judge Edmund Waddell, Jr., Judge L. L. Lewis, Henry W. Anderson, W. M. Habington, W. R. Meredith, I. J. Marcuse, John G. Luce, Dr. E. A. Hord, Pledge Moore, R. E. Cabell, James Marcuse, H. A. Lancaster, J. R. Major, M. J. Enright, Joseph P. Brady, Thomas S. Wheelwright, Charles E. Wortham, B. B. Arnold, M. K. Lowry, R. H. Talley, E. P. Murphy, Alvin E. Smith, H. G. Sharpley, George A. Hanson, Morgan Treat and a number of others.

A committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Wyndham R. Meredith, John G. Luce and Judge L. L. Lewis, met the train at Danville and accompanied Judge Taft to this city.

THINKS CAMPAIGN IS REMARKABLE

William Alden Smith Says Taft's Precedent Will Be Followed Every Four Years.

William Alden Smith, junior member from Michigan, who is with Mr. Taft, said last night:

"The campaign of Judge Taft in the South is in many respects the most remarkable ever conducted by a Republican presidential candidate, and in my opinion he has established a precedent which will be followed every four years as long as the republic shall stand."

"The crowds which have greeted him, the enthusiasm with which he has been received, the interest the people have manifested in his personality and the favor which the Republican principles have received here, have doubtless never in my mind that all that territory south of the Ohio River, and embracing the States of Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina, which have at one time or another given their votes to the Republican party, have nearly lost interest in the future of the country, who have sought to control them by reckless disregard of these well recognized principles of government once held dear by the Southern people."

Visit Was Opposed. "When Judge Taft determined to make his Southern tour his plan was stoutly opposed by those charged with the direct management of his campaign. When they protested to him against his devoting so much time in the heat of the campaign to the Southern States, he replied with warmth:

"I do not want to be President of half of my country. I want to be President of the whole of it. I am not content with a partial representation of the people of my own section. I can at least show my own desire to cultivate a closer fellowship with all, and I firmly believe that an honest, frank interchange of views will bear its fruit in the future strength of our party in the South."

"His great speech at Chattanooga, in which he told the people of Tennessee and of the South of his interest in their welfare, has the true ring of genuine Americanism, and brought forth, as it richly deserved, the thunderous applause of his hearers. I wish it might have been possible for Mr. Taft to have gone into Georgia, South Carolina and Mississippi. His attractive and impressive personality, his candor and frankness, would have impressed these people as it has in the States through which he has passed, giving encouragement to those who have fought the battles of sound money and protection without the aid or encouragement of the national Republican organization."

CONFERENCE WITH PRESIDENT

Taft to Breakfast and Lunch at White House and Attend Church.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 17.—What it is believed will be the last political conference of the campaign to take place between William H. Taft, the Republican candidate for President, and his foremost champion, President Roosevelt, will take place at the White House to-morrow. Judge Taft's last speech in the South was made at Richmond, Va., to-night. He will arrive in Washington at 3 o'clock Sunday morning.

Judge Taft has accepted the President's invitation to breakfast at the White House at 8 A. M. After that they will have a few hours to discuss quietly the different phases of the general political situation.

Together the President and Judge Taft will attend religious services at All Souls' Unitarian Church. Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor, will deliver the sermon. This is the same church that President John Quincy Adams attended while he was President. Mr. Taft has regularly attended this church ever since he has been in Washington.

Judge Taft will again be the guest of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House for lunch at 1:30 P. M. The afternoon probably will be devoted to a final political conference, at which Mr. Taft will take up with the President the national campaign at every angle.

Mr. Taft will depart from Washington at midnight for his tour through the East, after which he will turn westward toward Ohio, where he is stumping tour will terminate Wednesday next.

UNION VETERAN GREETED MAN WHO GAVE HIM JOB

In the concourse that gathered at the Southern depot Saturday night to welcome Mr. Taft to Richmond was an old Union war veteran, who proudly exhibited a commission signed with the name of William H. Taft. The old veteran was Dr. Valentine King, formerly of Hopkins, Mo., but now of Seven Pines, Va. The National Cemetery at Seven Pines is a small one, being only one and one-half acres in size and containing only 134 interments. Dr. King's application for the position was endorsed by Congressman W. P. Hepburn, of Iowa, and O. F. Humphreys, master-surgeon of the United States Army. The place pays $50 a month and is a comfortable berth for the old soldier, until he, too, shall be called to sleep among those over whom he now keeps guard.

CHALONER ROASTS CLUBMEN

Says New Yorkers Spied Upon Him. Tells of His Courtship.

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va., October 17.—Chaloner, the spitting, ill-bred and facetious conduct of prominent members of the Knickerbocker Club, of New York, the title of his courtship of Amelia Rives, the authoress, her rejection of him because of his French blood, the immortality of the soul, featured today's testimony of John Armstrong Chaloner, the former husband of Amelia Rives, and brother of the Democratic nominee for Governor of New York, in the proceedings to establish the propriety of recovering a fortune he claims to have been deprived of in New York.

It was the third day of Mr. Chaloner's testimony as a witness in his own behalf, the case being against him, "Chaloner v. Sherman." Mr. Chaloner testified regarding the filing of the petition for his commitment to the Bloomingdale Insane Asylum, and discussed his relations with the late Stanford White, the August St. Gaudens, the sculptor, Dr. Moses A. Starr and Dr. Eugene Fuller and other members of the Knickerbocker Club. He said the members of that club annoyed him by what he characterized as ill-mannered and facetiousness and illbred spirit on his part. When he returned to New York, he said he gave fictitious addresses when he left New York.

It was about this time, he said, that he was paying attention to Miss Rives, and by previous appointment to go to see her at Castle Hill. He was "refused" by her, he added, "in my first campaign of love, and I decided on a series of attacks. I found an insurmountable barrier to a successful termination of my campaign in a French beard I had grown, and I cut it off. When I returned to New York it looked as if I had been in the Knickerbocker Club."

"What's up now? Foxy has lost his beard," they yelled.

Mr. Chaloner testified that Stanford White and St. Gaudens tried to procure from him an unlimited power of attorney, and he attested his soul immortality.

"I expect," he declared, "to be planted at the east end of the turf at Merry Mills, N. Y., midway between the ladies' and gentlemen's bathing houses."

DANVILLE THROUG HOOTS JUDGE TAFT

Candidate Is Much Annoyed by Jeering in This Bryan Stronghold City.

OTHER TOWNS ARE CORDIAL

In Concluding Tour of South, Nominee Believes He Did Well in Coming.

Judge Taft last night finished his campaign in the South. He will breakfast at the White House this morning, and after spending the day in Washington will leave at midnight for New Jersey, to speak through that State, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia, arriving at Cincinnati Wednesday morning for one day's rest. The remaining three days of next week he will give to Indiana, and the balance of the time until election day to New York City and State.

Cordially Received Yesterday. As he did in Kentucky and Tennessee on Thursday and Friday, so Judge Taft urged the application of business principles in politics through North Carolina and Virginia. As yesterday and the day before, so also today there was no variance in the cordiality of the South in receiving its first visit from a Republican presidential candidate, save at Danville, Va., where he was jeered.

At Danville the Taft special train stopped over for about fifteen minutes in the afternoon, while en route from Greensboro to Richmond. The event had been freely advertised, and the candidate was greeted by a crowd of between 3,000 and 2,500, 50 per cent of whom were negroes. Mr. Taft was presented by Congressman Slomp, of the Ninth District, and spoke briefly.

Candidate Is Jeered. The reception accorded the Republican nominee here was not enthusiastic, to say the least. He spoke only a few minutes, in which he assailed Bryan and the doctrines of the Democratic party. Taft's mention of Bryan's name was the signal for a demonstration. The candidate was frequently interrupted by side remarks and some jeering.

The crowd, upon the whole, while not in sympathy with the remarks of the candidate, appeared inclined to cordial welcome. Senator Smith followed Mr. Taft, and spoke for about two minutes. His mention of Bryan's name also caused cheering, to which he said: "You need not be so anxious for Bryan; he is going to run every four years as long as he lives."

Some one in the audience turned the laugh on the speaker by crying out: "Taft will never run again."

Glad to Be Here. At South Boston, despite frequent calls for him, Mr. Taft made no dress, members of his party relieving him of the strain.

This was a frequent expression of the candidate during the day: "I am very glad to come down here and receive so cordial a welcome—cordial not only from my Republican friends, but from my Democratic friends, who are still erring."

Judge Taft has been told by Republican leaders in every one of the Southern States he has visited that his invasion of the South has been most opportune, and will be beneficial, not only in the present campaign, but will mark the beginning of the real political awakening of the South. He has also been told that real hopes are entertained of carrying Kentucky and North Carolina, and that Republican sentiment is gaining ground rapidly in Tennessee.

When Judge Taft began to speak in Kentucky he frankly said he did not expect to get any electoral votes in the territory he was to visit South of the Ohio and Mason and Dixon's line, and he said nothing since to indicate a change in his expectations. Although he expresses the greatest satisfaction and encouragement as to the whole trip.

All Democrats. Unlike the two preceding days, not a single Republican city, town or community was within the radius of the Taft special yesterday. He traversed North Carolina from west to east, beginning at Statesville before 8 o'clock. At Salisbury the candidate was driven through the town and spoke in the local theatre, while former Secretary Shaw addressed the crowd.

Here he was introduced by J. Elwood Cox, Lexington and High Point were ports of brief calls.

J. Elwood Cox, a banker and manufacturer of High Point, is the Republican nominee for Governor of North Carolina, which he was urged by Judge Taft to give him cordial support.

An hour and a half was spent in Greensboro and two meetings were held of the local committee, was granted the privilege of speaking at the opera house, where he had, he said, delivered his first political speech in the South. While this meeting was progressing Senator William Alden Smith and Leslie M. Shaw held forth in the auditorium.

Here Judge Taft made again the points he Friday brought out at Chattanooga: "If the South wants political influence she has got to exercise intelligence in the discharge of her political duty."

He followed this declaration by indicating the kind of intelligence he meant: "Ask yourselves where would be your cotton manufactures, your tobacco industry and your furniture factories if the Republican policy of protection were adopted."

"How is it," he pressed, "that our Democratic friends can go on voting one way and hoping to God that something will happen to make their votes count for nothing? There comes a time when you can run adherence to tradition into the ground, and I think that time has come now."

What Judge Taft said in North Carolina is illustrated by the following extracts from his speech at Salisbury. His salutation to the State was this: "I am glad to come into the State of North Carolina this morning."

"It is all right to discuss politics, but the question is: Have you used Clinchfield?"

beautiful October morning and receive this cordial reception. Complaint is very often heard of your people that North Carolina has not given her part of the administration of the government. She is not, she has able men, but as long as you are going to vote for the Democratic ticket and the Republican party is in power, I do not see how these gentlemen can do so. You can expect to share in the power.

Vote as Think. "In other words, let them vote as they think and then we will wipe out sectional lines."

At Salisbury, in the opera house, Judge Taft remarked: "You are second in rank in the manufacture of tobacco; you are third in the rank of manufacturers of lumber and timber products. You make one of your furniture as they make in Grand Rapids, Mich. I am giving you these figures merely to point out that unless we continue to have a protective tariff most of these industries will be ruined. The wealth that you have accumulated has accumulated by reason of the policy insisted upon by the Republican party in respect to the tariff."

"Yet how many electoral votes have you cast for North Carolina for the Republican party? Somebody may have a better memory than I have, but I don't recollect a single one. They are enterprising, progressive, courageous people in everything but politics, and I think it is time they began to think of showing the same enterprise that they do in manufacturing furniture and in reaching out to develop the enormous wealth of North Carolina."

At Reidsville. A brief stop was made at Reidsville before the expedition reached Virginia and Danville. Here a large crowd waited at the station, and Judge Taft addressed them from the rear of his car.

The audience here evidenced a decided liking for Bryan, by shouting before the expedition reached Virginia and Danville. Here a large crowd waited at the station, and Judge Taft addressed them from the rear of his car.

"I am delighted that I have so many Bryan voters here that I can talk a little sense into. I would like to ask whether they are in favor to-day of the free coinage of silver? No, not one; and yet the chief of their party recommended that for every year of his life, he should have a dollar of silver coinage. Are they in favor of the government ownership of railroads? Are they in favor of guarantee of bank deposits?"

"I have no doubt, you are because you are committed to Bryanism. What you are in favor of is this. You are in favor of any man opening a bank with $100,000, and going to his neighbor and saying: 'Give me $100,000 deposits so that I may speculate with it, because Robinson, who has got a bank up here, has $500,000 deposits, and he is responsible for every dollar of my deposits. That is a fine kind of a proposition. That is a fine kind of a proposition. That is a fine kind of a proposition. That illustrates just the character of a business man that Mr. Bryan and his followers are, and that shows how the confidence of the people is being put in Mr. Bryan into the White House."

were false, but this man Sheldon knows he is telling a lie. The statement of Mr. Straus was repeated to Mr. Sheldon, who said: "I don't think Mr. Straus would make that statement to me. I have no reply other than this to make, except to ask you to go to the White House and try to make a levy." Chairman Hitchcock, who was present when Mr. Sheldon made his reply, said that when the list of Republican contributions is published, which will be twenty days after election, it will refute all statements that have been made with regard to political levies or contributions.

When the two fleets finally came to anchor they presented an imposing spectacle. Thirty-two great warships occupied four long columns of eight each, the Americans taking the place of honor in the forefront, the Japanese immediately behind them, and heading due south.

As soon as the fleet came to anchor, a reception committee and attaches of the various foreign embassies and legations and the Mayor of Yokohama put off from shore for the flagship Connecticut.

American Ambassador O'Brien did not come down from Tokio because under navy etiquette he could not be present until the American commanding the fleet had paid an official call upon him.

[Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] LONDON, October 17.—Woman has just achieved a victory more remarkable than some of her recent political exploits. After more than ten years of patient warfare, which has not been aided by the militant tactics of the suffragettes, women have now persuaded the council of the Royal College of Surgeons to pass a decree admitting women to the examinations of the examining board of England, and also to examinations for fellowships in the Royal College of Surgeons. This means that women may now compete with men in the highest and most honorable degrees to be obtained in medicine and surgery.

IN MEMORIAM

The Lamb Is Slain. Miss ERNA PURCELL, seventeen years of age, was taken sick at Hollins Institute last December and died this October the 5th at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Purcell, of London, Va.

After a long season of illness, cared for by the most eminent physicians, every earthly comfort was tendered, but she died peacefully and watchfully, ever ready to gratify every desire of one so beautiful and so fair, availed nothing.

The Lamb was slain. God the Father knew best. Her life from infancy was pure and unspotted—yes, as pure as the lily beset with thorns. She was a child of God, and she was a child of the Father.

When the lily falls its chalice and the rose tree is nipped by winter's frost, and the stem is stripped of every vestige of foliage, that is not a token of lost hope, for when glad and welcome spring bursts forth and the warm sun glows upon the children, soon again the tender bud will put forth and yield her flowers more fragrant and beautiful than before.

So will the sainted dead, who have been laid to rest for a short space of time until we again shall see this slain lamb, whose brow will be bedecked with a heavenly crown, and whose parents and loved ones, who have borne this seeming calamity with such fortitude and who manifested such beautiful Christian courage, will be met by the chosen angel of our God, at the portals of heaven's gates, and welcomed by her to the city of the New Jerusalem.

In the twilight of her life, as the last pain left that patient body, as the flickering candle, but she smiled, as she beamed on her face a smile, as a symbol that, while she was dead to the world, she could see the glint of the golden gates of heaven, and she welcomed to her brought this heavenly smile that should heal the wounded hearts of her grief-stricken parents and loved ones.

By hundreds of friends from Baltimore, Richmond and Norfolk, a beautiful display of floral designs that were sent by hundreds of friends from Baltimore, Richmond and Norfolk, as well as many as magnificent as that fair face, crowned with a smile of one who had just attained an invitation to dwell in the house of our Lord forever.

WILL RESIST BEEF TRUST

Agricultural Party Forming in France to Fight American Invasion. [Special Cable to The Times-Dispatch.] PARIS, October 17.—Ex-Premier Meunier has organized an agricultural party in the Senate to resist the Chicago beef trust's invasion of the French market. The trust began three years ago by seeking to acquire near Dieppe a large space of ground for the construction of abattoirs. The Dieppe municipality refused to sell, but the trust, which had bought the land from the commune of Granville, near Havre, and erected an abattoir at a cost of $2,000,000. Proposals for purchase of land have also been addressed to Marseilles, Bordeaux and other ports where cattle are landed, and also near the international frontier.

M. Meunier's party has memorialized the government to stop this. It says that France possesses 50,000,000 head of cattle, worth $800,000,000 and the industry in their produce and their products, such as milk, cheese and butter, maintains about half the population of France. M. Meunier goes on to say:

"The plan of the Chicago trust is to commence by buying on the French cattle, which, owing to its immense capital, it can buy at very high prices. When that operation is completed, the trust has become the only possible buyer, it will lower the purchase price and strangle our agriculturists. If they resist, the trust will import American cattle to keep down the prices, while it will continue to sell 'dear' to the butchers and consumers."
